For more information, speak with an Ackerman Cancer Center social worker.

Tax Deductions for Medical Lodging

You may be able to include the cost of lodging not provided in a hospital or similar institution in your tax-deductible medical expenses. You can include the cost of such lodging while away from home if all of the following requirements are met:

1. The lodging is primarily for and essential to medical care.
2. The medical care is provided by a doctor in a licensed hospital or in a medical care facility related to, or the equivalent of, a licensed hospital.
3. The lodging is not lavish or extravagant under the circumstances.
4. There is no significant element of personal pleasure, recreation, or vacation in the travel away from home.

The amount you include in medical expenses for lodging cannot be more than $50 per night for each person. You can include lodging for a person traveling with the person receiving the medical care. For example, if a parent is traveling with a sick child, up to $100 per night can be included as medical expenses for lodging. Meals are not tax-deductible.
